MINDSONAR APPLICATIONS SHOWCASE

CONFLICT - Merely identifying and sharing the differences in thinking style and values between two people - or within a team - allows people to understand others uniqueness and how they process the world around them. Once shown, this avoids negative and less helpful labels and enables people to use others styles as resources rather than seeing them as obstacles.

As a MindSonar Professional you may have heard this one: "I discovered that he/she is not an bad person, they just have a different thinking style..."

Article MEASURING THE LEADERSHIP MINDSET - PART 3

By Jaap Hollander

Engagement - When it comes to attracting people, a leader minimally needs to be active in 'promoting' their vision. And they need to infuse that promotion with enthusiasm and confidence.

"Leadership", former US president Clinton says, "means bringing people together in pursuit of a common cause, developing a plan to achieve it and staying with it until the goal is achieved. Leaders need to ... attract talented, committed people with a wide variety of knowledge, perspectives and skills. (Fortune magazine, 2014. Quoted by Dilts in 'Conscious Leadership and Resilience').

Talented people will often have many possible causes they can devote their energies to and many different job opportunities. And people are not as stable in their work choices as they were 20 years ago. Millennials, for instance, have a reputation for moving from job to job, being constantly on the lookout for the next best thing. Polish researcher Monika Kwiecińska notes that generation Z significantly less often chooses the 'matching' meta program. In other words: they are harder to please.
